Six busted on meth charges

Six people were arrested and a juvenile was taken to the hospital early Saturday morning, April 28, after officers from the Gallatin County Sheriff's Department and the State Police found a methamphetamine lab in a Glencoe home.

Facing a variety of charges including manufacturing methamphetamine, unlawful possession of methamphetamine precursor, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana and engaging in organized crime are: Florence Hale, 24, of Verona; Linda Harris, 37, of Warsaw; Brian Rowe, 42, of Glencoe; Adam Bailey, 19 of Sparta and Katlein Woodward 23, of Glencoe. In addition, a 14 year-old juvenile found at the home was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Florence for evaluation.

The arrests were made at Rowe's home located at 114 Main St. in Glencoe at about 1:30 a.m., Saturday morning.

"This concludes a six-month investigation," said Sheriff Josh Neale. "We've had the house under surveillance. We regot our search warrant from the county attorney about 9 p.m. Friday and took action when we knew everyone would be there."

There were no injuries but Neale said there was one close call.

"We found one of the women in the back seat of a car looking very uneasy," he said. "It turns out she had a bottle under her shirt that was a one-step meth lab. If those bottles aren't burped or opened up regularly they will explode. Luckily, the bottle fell out when she got out of the car and we were able to defuse the situation."

All six suspects are now at the Carroll County Detention Center.

Neale also said one of the reasons his department has been conducting roadblocks in recent weeks is to find meth labs.

"People are driving around in cars making meth," the Sheriff said. "We've found road blocks are a good deterrent."

Neil Miles denied parole for drunk driving death

Last week, a Kentucky parole review board denied parole for Neil Miles, 29, of Warsaw. Miles was convicted in May, 2009, of killing Samantha Spade in a drunk driving accident.

During his trial a remorseful Miles admitted he was driving drunk when he ran head-on into Spade's car on Nov. 3, 2007. He received a sentence of 20 years in prison. Court records show Miles' blood alcohol level was .23 percent at the time of accident, which is nearly three times the legal limit of .08.

Spade was 18 when she died and had recently graduated as Valedictorian of her Gallatin County High School Class.

Miles was not allowed to speak to the parole board at the hearing but Spade's mother, Debbie Powers, was. Powers now lives in Pennsylvania and was accompanied to the hearing by several family members and friends.

She told the board that Miles should remain in jail because she believed he was a threat to society due to his record of drinking and driving.

"My daughter was a wonderful, intelligent and compassionate young lady," Powers said after the hearing. "She did not deserve to be killed like this."

Miles won't be eligible for parole again until 2014. Powers said she

Judge won't lower bail for Stephenson

Financial fraud, murder charges may come next

Circuit Judge J. R. Schrand refused last week to reduce the $50,000 cash only bond of Charles "Steve" Stephenson.

Stephenson, 58, lives in Walton but is well known in Gallatin County. He's charged in Boone County with tampering with evidence and possession of a controlled substance (Oxycontin). Police believe he may be responsible for far more serious crimes and hope to keep him in jail until they can prove it.

At last Wednesday's bond hearing, Commonwealth Attorney Linda Tally Smith said police officers have confirmed Stephenson was the last person to be with Aurora, Ind., resident Leigh Jennings before she was brutally murdered in her home, on March 29. Jennings called Stephenson her "companion" and had lent him money. She was found dead with multiple head fractures.

Shortly before his arrest, Stephenson attempted to commit suicide on April 9, by slashing his wrists after police searched his home for evidence. His life was saved when police returned to the home to interview him.

Police have not confirmed it but he may also be a suspect in the murders of his uncle and aunt, Billy and Peggy Stephenson, both 74, of Boone County who were also well known here. They were found brutally killed in their home last May. No one has been arrested for the murders. Police have said little about their investigation except that they've devoted thousands of man-hours in the attempt to find the killer.

At last week's hearing, Commonwealth Attorney Smith also told Judge Schrand she plans to seek an indictment against Stephenson this week on financial fraud charges. The charges are "related to a series of fraudulent transactions that have taken place over a number of years which total in excess of hundreds of thousands of dollars even by Mr. Stephenson's admission," Smith said.

Stephenson has a history of financial problems, including a $2,000 judgment against him from a credit card company. Also last December, a judge ordered him to repay $3,000 he borrowed from his aunt, Fay Parks, in 2007. Stephenson was

Al Bernstein (left) of B&B Riverboats brought his Belle of Cincinnati stern-wheeler to Warsaw on Sunday so he could throw Russell "Bubby" Hall of Warsaw (right) a grand 90th birthday party. About 250 people enjoyed a lavish feast and a two-hour cruise. Hall worked as a riverboat captain for Bernstein for many years and is credited with navigational innovations that are still in use. ### This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

Some of my friends think no one should have to work this week.

"Derby Week is sacred," Doug Terry told me soon after I moved here. "The whole week should be a national holiday. No one should have to work when the Kentucky Derby is on the horizon."

Although I agree with Doug, I have a feeling Congress isn't going to add a national holiday to the calendar for the Derby. Doug also thinks it's my responsibility to pick a winner for the big race. "Every newspaper in the state has an obligation to pick a Derby winner," Doug told me. "You have to tell your readers who you think is going to win. It's part of your job!"

Over the years, I've followed Doug's orders and used many different schemes and formulas to choose my Derby favorite. I've looked at bloodlines, trainers, color, past history and tail length. I've talked with breeders, a fortune teller and even Steve Cauthen, who is the last jockey to win the Triple Crown, in my attempts to predict the outcome of the most important horse race of them all. Unfortunately, my track record is rather disappointing.

I'm not discouraged, though. In fact, this year I'm more determined than ever to foretell the future and correctly predict which horse will win Saturday's Run for the Roses.

My first step was to ask my friends and neighbors what they think. Laura Hansen, who lives across the street from the newspaper, says she knows who the winner will be.

"It has to be Hansen," she said about the white horse from Northern Kentucky. "Not only is he a local horse, they spell his name just like mine. How could he lose?"

"I'm going with Dullahan," our sports writer Mark Gray said. "I made money on him when he won the Blue Grass Stakes and I'm sure he'll be good to me again this Saturday."

My brother thinks Bodemeister is the best horse in the race. Carol Spitzer, who owns Pier 99 Marina on Craigs Creek Lake, likes Gemologist because of her penchant for diamonds.

Our delivery man says it'll be Union

Rags, my barber thinks El Padrino can't be beat and the reporter who writes about horse racing for the Louisville Courier Journal also likes the probable favorite, Union Rags.

I've been told Creative Cause can't win because his trainer has decided to take off his blinkers. Saber Cat is supposedly too slow, I'll Have Another is too tipsy, Alpha is too afraid of crowds, My Adonis is too conceited, Done Talking is too shy and Daddy Long Legs is too tall.

David Booth, Gallatin County's handicapper extraordinaire, hasn't told me what he thinks yet but that's okay because I have my mind made up. I'm putting my money on Take Charge Indy this Saturday. That's because he has 14 letters in his name and that's as good a reason as I can find.

Kentucky Derby has long, colorful history

As every blue-blooded Kentuckian knows, this Saturday will be the 138th running of "The Most Exciting Two Minutes in Sports".

Today, the Kentucky Derby is as famous for its spectators' large, colorful hats and raucous revelry as it is for being the nation's second oldest Thoroughbred horse race or the first leg of the U.S. Triple Crown of Thoroughbred Racing. Since 1875, the race — also referred to as the "Run for the Roses" — has taken place at Louisville's Churchill Downs on the first Saturday in May.

The race was the brainchild of Col. M. Lewis Clark, who toured France and England from 1872 to 1873 with several of the day's prominent horseracing leaders. During his travels, Clark devised a plan to establish the Louisville Jockey Club and build the racetrack that would eventually be known as Churchill Downs upon his return to Kentucky.

Over the following decades, the Kentucky Derby expanded and modernized, attracting increasingly large crowds of spectators. The Kentucky Derby Festival, a two-week-long citywide celebration that precedes the race, was launched in 1935. In 1952, the race was first televised and two years later, the purse exceeded $100,000 for the first time. In 1973, Secretariat broke the two-minute mark and still holds the record for the fastest time ever run in the Derby.

During its 134-year history, the Kentucky Derby has come to be associated with several traditions, including the blanket of roses draped over the winning jockey, the playing of Stephen Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home" as the horses parade in front of the grandstands, and the drinking of mint juleps. While the raucous revelry takes place in the infield, an area inside the track that serves as "party central," Churchill Downs' celebrated box seats, known as "Millionaire's Row," draw wealthy, well connected and celebrity spectators.

Here's hoping you pick a winner.

Ham Radio is not headed for extinction

Dear Editor:

Regarding last week's Editorial, "Things Headed For Extinction in America", I disagree with including ham radio operators on that list.

As an amateur (ham) radio operator and emergency coordinator for Gallatin County, I can report this activity is alive and well.

Allow me to quote from a recent report from the American Radio Relay League:

"The first quarter of 2012 saw a high level of Amateur Radio license exam sessions . . . These numbers out-paced the 2011 first quarter results by 30 percent . . . Statistics over the last 13 years reveal that these are the highest numbers that we've ever seen for the total number of U.S. amateurs. Now there are more than 704,000 radio amateurs in the U.S."

Kentucky Commentary

Politics is king of Kentucky road funding

To fully understand the latest blow-up in the legislature and the evolution of politics in Kentucky road building, let's start at Manntown in southern Russell County, which was never really a town (many Manns lived there) but is where state Senate President David Williams wants to build a road and a bridge, so those points are the beginning and end of our story.

Sometime around 1930, a committee wanted to extend Tennessee's Alvin York Highway northward as a route to connect Chicago and Atlanta. That would have been a more direct route than those in general use today, but bigger places got the big roads.

In 1938, when Congress authorized a dam to create Lake Cumberland, prospects improved. Wolf Creek Dam would provide a river crossing and put an end to the fording and ferries. The Army Corps of Engineers built the tortuously winding access roads to the dam site in the 1940s and it became Ky. 35, but that's the last time any real road building has been done in northern Clinton or southern Russell counties — despite promises over the last 65 years.

In the late 1950s, when the road became U.S. 127, which ran south to Chattanooga, folks thought the federal label would make improvements more likely. When Louie Nunn was governor, he concentrated on building roads to and through his hometown of Glasgow. He proposed a toll road from Elizabethtown to Albany but when Wendell Ford was elected governor, he nixed the road.

In 1987, Wallace Wilkinson promised that, if elected governor, he would rebuild U.S. 127 all the way to the border of Tennessee but he did not keep his promise. The General Assembly started taking a bigger role in roads during this time. After Wilkinson crossed swords with legislators, the General Assembly took ultimate control of the plan.

Legislators had required a plan since the early 1980s when they gained much independence from the governor, but that hadn't changed the old game of political back-scratching, favor-trading and patronage that had gotten roads built for 60 years. With the new power to approve and change the plan, lawmakers had more leverage.

After Paul Patton became governor in 1995, he negotiated an understanding with legislators that was intended to give due weight to the technical experts in the Transportation Cabinet, who based road decisions mainly on traffic counts, congestion, safety and cost. Theirs is not a perfect formula. It gives little weight to the potential for economic development. For example, U.S. 127 is a major, federally numbered north-south route with a 21-mile bottleneck at a huge tourist attraction that is the largest lake by volume in the eastern U.S. It's a security risk to have a highway running across it.

Enter Williams, who became Senate president in 2000. In 2007, he scored a huge project to rebuild the two main highways in his home of Cumberland County, and in the final days of Gov. Ernie Fletcher's term won an $11 million change order that made the contract even bigger.

Fletcher left the Road Fund with little money about the time its fuel tax revenue was slipping, giving new Gov. Steve Beshear a reason to cancel the change order, and that was the beginning of bad blood between Beshear and Williams. So, it was no real surprise when Williams added to the plan almost $27 million for the U.S. 127 project and tried to force Beshear to sign it before the Senate would approve the transportation budget, prompting the standoff that caused a special session.

Williams wasn't the only legislative leader with big money in the plan. House Speaker Greg Stumbo's Floyd County is getting $79 million for a road to cross the mountainous ridges that separate Right Beaver and Left Beaver creeks and the Big Sandy River. The project will provide a modest shortcut between Pikeville and Hazard, but at a high per-mile cost. It may be done in conjunction with mountaintop-removal mining to limit its cost, but that's a crashshoot.

The worthiness of these projects can be debated, but there's no doubt politics trumps fairness in the building of Kentucky roads. There is no way to remove politics from the system, but we should look for ways to make it less political.

Stephenson

Continued from page 1 required to make monthly payments but several of his checks bounced. The morning after Leigh Jennings' death Stephenson made a $1,000 payment to his aunt.

Last Wednesday, Stephenson's court appointed attorney, Steve Florian, asked Schrand to reduce his client's $50,000 cash bond.

"Anyone else would have had their bond reduced in district court," Florian said. "He's being held based on a lot of allegations that are floating around but he has not been named as a suspect in any other cases."

Smith, however, argued Stephenson would be a threat to himself and others and that he might flee if he is freed. She also said because of his suicide attempt, doctors would not have allowed him to be released from the hospital unless he was going to be in custody.

Stephenson's ex-wife, Arlene, and son, Farley, were at the hearing but did not speak to reporters.

Schrand decided the next day, Thursday, April 26, that Stephenson's bond should not be reduced. His next hearing is scheduled for May 16.

People... in The News

Gallatin County Lower Elementary School Principal Joe Wright has been accepted into the Kentucky Chamber Foundation's Leadership Institute for School Principals. Participants in the program are selected by an advisory board and it offers school principals powerful leadership training from the nationally acclaimed Center for Creative Leadership, a top-ranked global provider of executive education founded in 1970.

School principals are responsible for everything that happens in his or her building but principals' most important work is making sure students achieve at the highest possible levels — giving them the best foundation for success later in life. That means teachers and other team members in a school building must be focused on the same goal and that requires strong leadership from the top.

Research has shown that effective leaders have a positive impact on student and school performance and that is why the Kentucky Chamber Foundation is committed to improving education by offering school leaders executive-level leadership training unmatched anywhere in the state.

Mr. Wright has been principal at Gallatin County Lower Elementary School for the past ten years.

Another week has gone by, and here's what some of our friends and neighbors have been doing:

Shirley Chipman's Saturday guests were Autaum and Savannah Doolin, as well as Tim, Denise, and Koty Means from Lexington. Mae Wallace visited Saturday night. Sunday dinner guests were Lanette and Jama Morrison, Derina, Savannah, and Autaum Doolin.

Aileen Chipman enjoyed celebrating her birthday with visits from Jessica Niebergall-Schrage, Ruthie Niebergall, Shirley Chipman, and Autaum and Savannah Doolin. Lanette and Jama Morrison and Derina Doolin telephoned their birthday wishes. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, AILEEN!

Bob Weldon spent Saturday afternoon with four of his high school friends. The group got together to visit with another of "the gang" who is going through cancer treatments. They enjoyed the day retelling old stories.

Bev Andrew took her sister, Debbie, shopping one day last week and both had a great time.

Rick & Bev Andrew celebrated Rick's birthday with his son, Tyler, and Tyler's fiancée, Danielle, Sunday afternoon. Bev attended a birthday party for her four-year-old granddaughter, Meredith Boots, last Sunday. Meredith's brother, Nolan Boots, came home with Momaw Bev. HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO RICK AND MEREDITH!

Ann Beach is now in room 205 at Gallatin Health Care and would truly appreciate cards or visits.

Mary Rae Mattox had a night out with friends on Saturday, all enjoying a great meal at Belterra. She reports that her Chihuahua puppy, Peanut, is recuperating from being spayed and is not quite her old self, but is expected to be back to normal in a week or so.

Patsy Brown attended the Talent Show at Gallatin County Lower Elementary School to see her nieces, Jada and Carly Towles, dance to a Justin Bieber song. Patsy said the twins did a great job, then they all went to Dairy Queen to celebrate with ice cream.

Mary Jane Day attended the 4-H Drama Club play, Buckshot and Blossoms Saturday evening. She said the children were extremely talented and the play was most entertaining.

Alice Johnson and her daughter, Angela Mitchell, attended an overnight retreat at Happy Hills Christian Camp in Carroll County, Friday evening. Accompanied by 40 other ladies from the South Fork Christian Church, they enjoyed a great dinner in the evening, had praise and worship time and Bible Study. The group had breakfast and lunch at the retreat on Saturday before returning home, greatly uplifted by the experience.

Greg, Amy, and Hayden Dickerson and Amy's sister, Ashley Wartman of Dayton, enjoyed a visit with Amy's son, Jordan Riesenberg, in Boone County on Saturday. The Dickersons stopped at Skyline Chili for lunch before returning home. Sunday after church, Amy and Hayden spent most of the afternoon reading a Goosebumps book about garden gnomes who come to life. Amy said the book was most entertaining and highly recommends it for children.

Delores and Terry Hopperton kindly babysat their grandchildren: triplets Lila, Carter, and Madelyn, so their parents, Brad and Jenny, could have a much-deserved day out. On Sunday, Delores attended a baby shower for Diane Scott after church, then relaxed with her husband, Terry, and grandsons, Josh, and Kaleb Frontz. Brad, Jenny, Lila, Carter, and Madelyn Hopperton stopped by for a visit after having participated in the MDS walk in Cincinnati.

Doris Combs celebrated her birthday this week with a visit from sister, Betty West Lionberger, and nephew, Keith West, and his wife, Carol. Betty gave Doris a picture of her late grandmother, a bag of culinary treats and balloons, then they all sang the traditional family birthday song to her. Doris also received numerous birthday calls from other family members. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, DORIS!

Betty and Boyd Lionberger went shopping in LaGrange, Saturday, and met Keith and Carol West for lunch at Ponderosa while there. After returning home, the Lionbergers were delighted when daughter and son-in-law, Cindy and Jack Williamson, brought their daughter, Jacalyn, to spend the night and attend church with them on Sunday morning. Following the worship service, the Lionbergers took Jacalyn down to the riverfront to watch Jack and Cindy board the Belle of Cincinnati for a river cruise down the mighty Ohio.

The Williamsons had received tickets for the cruise from Bubby Hall who was the guest of honor for his birthday. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, BUBBY!

On their way home to Glencoe, the Lionbergers stopped to see Linda and George Smith and their amazing singing dog, Rusty. Rusty has at last earned his freedom, and happily sang with Jacalyn.

Planting by the Signs

by Phil Case

For those of you planting – or planning to plant – your garden by the phases of the moon and signs of the zodiac, here's the information for this week.

Within the next three to 10 days, depending on which chart you're looking at, the statistical danger of a killing frost should pass, Mother's Day (May 13) being on the far end of that chart. Also, these warm days we've been having should finally get the soil temperature up to where warm-weather veggies will do more than sit in the ground and pout.

So, if you're planning to do some serious spring-to-fall gardening this year, now's the time to get ready to pull out all the stops and have at it.

The moon is in the light phase until the last 25 minutes of Derby Day on Saturday, 11:35 p.m. for the dark moon to come into force to be precise. Thus through this week proceed with only light-moon activities and above-ground-producing veggie planting. Then beginning Sunday and until the new moon on May 20, only below-ground producing veggies and dark moon activities.

The signs find us in the midst of a series of flowering signs, those especially good for, well, planting flowers because they are "bloom days."

While you can certainly plant veggies this week, the signs Virgo and Libra are best suited for flowers. Believers – and you're one, aren't you? – say veggies planted when flowering signs are in force just bloom and bloom and don't set as much fruit.

I think I related the story last year of the gentleman who told me he planted his cucumbers when a flowering sign was in force. He reported having the most beautiful blooms every – but nary a cucumber!

Specifically, today (Wednesday) is ruled by Virgo (the bowels) with Libra (the reins) finishing out the week on Thursday and Friday.

Hit the garden stores and flower outlets and put out your flowers, whether plants or seeds. They should bloom you proud!

Then comes Derby Day on Saturday and, at least according to some sources, the last statistical day for frost and also the day the moon moves to the dark phase (at 11:35 p.m.) so most of the day is under the influence of the light moon.

The sign Saturday through Monday is in is Scorpio (the secrets). All of Derby Day will be with the light moon in force then Sunday and Monday will be with the dark moon ruling. Thus on Saturday plant above-ground producers then beginning Sunday it's below-ground producers.

Given the fact that we should be at the statistical end of a killing frost threat, you should be okay planting hot-weather, frost-sensitive veggies beginning Saturday. Just be prepared to protect them in case a late frost threatens.

Then beginning Tuesday, May 8, and continuing through May 14, we find a series of so-so signs in force. These signs aren't outstandingly productive but they aren't destructive either, just so-so. All, too, will be with the dark moon in force so if we add the two Pisces (feet) days on May 15-16, we have an outstanding stretch for making changes.

So, if you have changes to make like stopping smoking, starting a diet or exercise program, weaning small animals or children, scheduling elective surgery – anything that requires a change – here's the formula: The moon in the dark phase and the signs going out of the body, past anything that "functions" so that means thighs, knees, legs and feet – Sagittarius through Pisces.

There are nine days this month that perfectly fit the formula, May 8-16.

Arbor Day Foundation offers booklet

The Arbor Day Foundation is offering a handy tree-care booklet designed to help people plant and care for trees.

Anyone can receive the Conservation Trees booklet simply by making a $3 donation to the Foundation.

Conservation Trees is a user-friendly booklet that features illustrations, colorful photos and easily understood descriptions.

"Conservation Trees is an ideal resource for tree planters throughout the country," said John Rosenow, chief executive and founder of the Arbor Day Foundation. "It is important that people know how to properly plant and care for their trees."

"Taking care of existing trees is just as critical as planting new ones," Rosenow continued. "Trees clean the air, keep our water sources pure and conserve energy. Trees provide so many benefits to a community, and that's why it is so vital to take care of them."

The booklet provides details about the right way to plant and prune trees. It also includes tips on using shade trees and windbreaks to save on energy costs, attracting songbirds and creating a living snow fence.

To receive the Conservation Trees booklet, send a $3 check along with your name and address to: Conservation Trees, Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, or order online at arborday.org/conservationtrees.

Ask Doctor Dirt...

By David Hull

Dear Doctor Dirt,

I did a bad thing. I finally decided to do something about the dandelion problem in my yard. So, I borrowed a pull-behind sprayer and put 2-4-D weed killer down. Here's the bad part: I didn't rinse the sprayer out very well before I used it. Evidently, the last chemical used in it was Round-Up. You guessed it. I killed the dandelions alright. Unfortunately, I killed a good part of the grass in my yard too. It's pretty ugly. Any suggestions for what I ought to do now?

D.S.
Ghent

Dear D.S.,

In the Extension business, this is what we call a "teachable moment". On a positive note, you, and all who read this, have learned a valuable lesson from this experience. On a negative note, you had to kill your yard to learn the lesson.

At this point, I don't think I need to dwell on the fact that when using a sprayer of any kind, make sure it's rinsed out well before using it. This is especially true when using a borrowed piece of equipment. Let's instead concentrate on what your next step ought to be.

First of all, it's important to realize that the dead grass probably won't come back. As anyone who's used Round-Up knows, it's pretty good at killing stuff. Anything that greens-up in those dead areas are likely to be more weeds. So waiting for something "good" to happen is probably gonna be fruitless.

My advice is to re-seed. But before you do, if you do still have some weeds in the yard, now's a good time to spray them. Heck, why not, right?

For putting the seed down, I suggest using a slit-seeder. It's kind of like a no-till drill for your yard. It's a walk-behind unit that cuts slits in the soil and drops seeds in the slits. They can be rented at most rental places.

Before using the seeder, mow your yard as close to the ground as possible; almost scalp it. This makes it easier for the slit-seeder to work. Since scalping a lawn can be hard on a mower, I suggest you borrow a mower to do this. In your case, I'd borrow a mower from the same guy who loaned you the tainted sprayer! Just kiddin' there D.S.

The good thing about slit-seeding is that no straw mulch is needed. You don't want to do it when the ground is soaking wet or bone dry. Since the seeder puts the seed in contact with the soil, less watering is needed too.

Well, good luck and remember to rinse out those sprayers before and after using them. It's a good thing.

News from the 4-H Desk

by Lora Stewart

Volunteer with 4-H!

Whether they're leading a club meeting or helping judge a speech contest, adult volunteers are an essential and invaluable part of 4-H. In fact, many 4-H programs would not be possible without the help of caring, adult volunteers.

If you enjoy helping young people learn new subjects and reach goals, volunteering may be for you. With a variety of programs ranging from archery to cooking, adults volunteers can find a 4-H program to meet their interests or experience level.

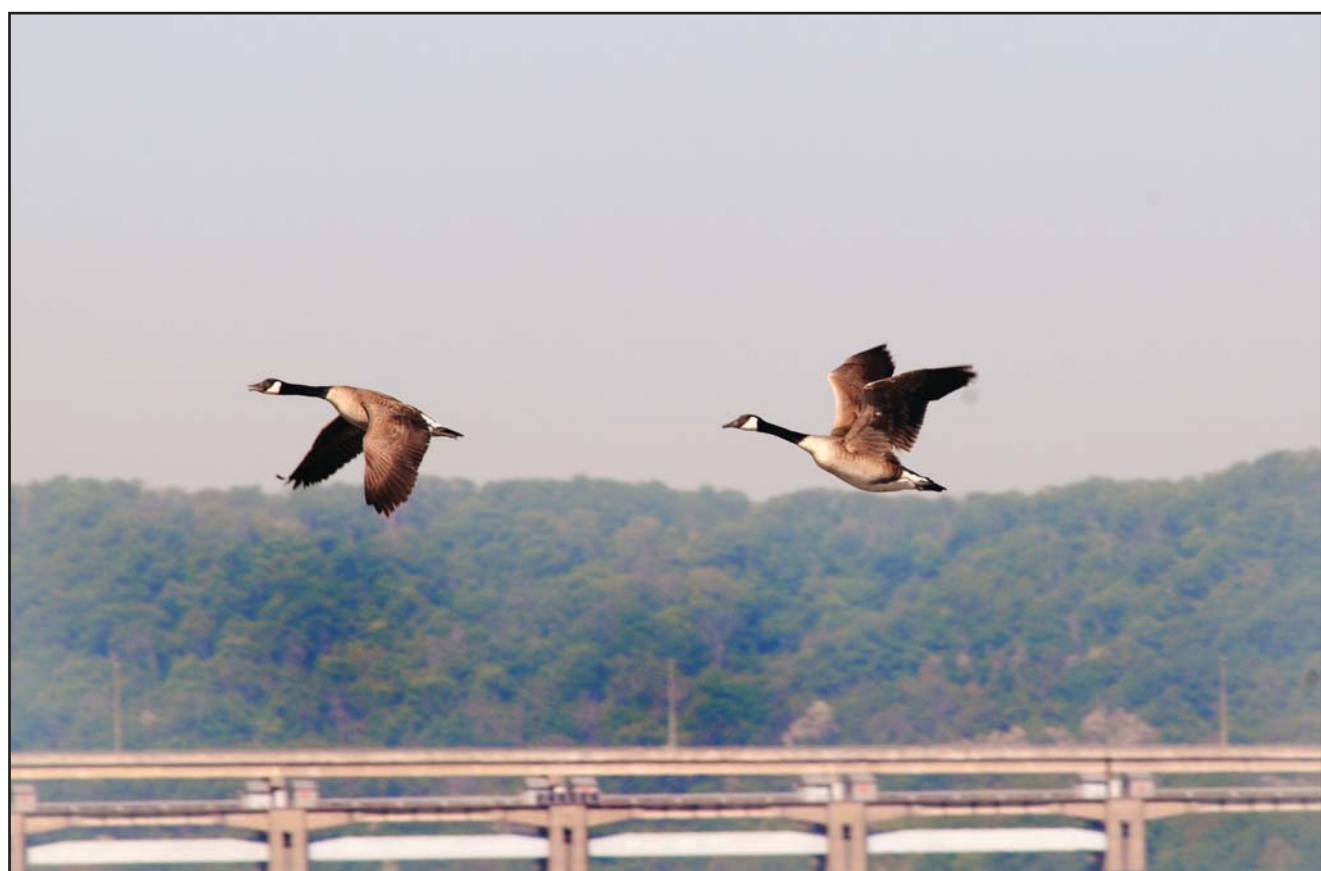

Adult volunteers can help shape future leaders by helping 4-H'ers develop leadership skills, a sense of community and a positive connection with someone from a different age group. Volunteers can serve in different capacities from one night for one event to a year commitment as a leader of a 4-H club.

The vast majority of those who volunteer find they receive back just as much as they give. Volunteering is an opportunity for you to share your talents and interests with others. In the process, you can positively impact in the lives of young people, give back to your community and have fun doing an activity you enjoy. Many volunteers find it's very rewarding for them to watch young people build self-confidence and self-worth as they develop new interests and accomplish goals.

If you're interested in becoming a volunteer, contact the Gallatin County Cooperative Extension Service.

Educational programs of the Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, sex, religion, disability or national origin.

Flying high

Two Canada Geese fly above the Markland Dam on an April afternoon. The big geese used to be rare in our part of the world but no longer. There are large numbers of them that live here all year. Most geese are now getting ready to welcome their offspring into the world. Photo by Kelley Warnick

Cryptogram

A cryptogram is a puzzle where a sentence is encoded by substituting the actual letters of the sentence with different letters. The challenge of the puzzle is to 'decode' the sentence to reveal the original English sentence. We have provided a few of the decoded letters to help get you started.
